

PREFACE

We are pleased to present the newest volume of the Mongolian Geoscientist.

Because of the COVID-19 all around the world is under quarantine. Although, we still have the chance to do research and the freedom to publish online. Despite the difficult times, I would like special thanks to all researchers who have published their articles in this volume.

This volume 50 contains 5 papers with a distinct authorship from different countries. Published articles focused on paleontology, geology, geochronology, geodesy, and mineral deposit research. Our Editorial Board members and external invited reviewers extensively reviewed these papers. I believe that all papers published during this issue will have a great contribution to the Geoscience research, academic and professional field.

Our journal stands one of the scientific journals published in Mongolia. We are aiming to become an internationally recognized open access journal. We invite authors from everywhere to submit their valuable research for publication in our journal. The journal's editorial board members wish to thank everyone who over the years has contributed to Mongolian Geoscientist. We also thank all of the authors who contributed to the present issue.
